Organic Beekeeping Grant F. C. Gillard, 2015-01-21 Chemicals used to be the answer to all our problems today they seem to be the cause Once upon a time we planted our gardens in dirt today we pay for them with plastic Jolted awake society has discovered new answers in an old solution Less chemical more organic Beekeepers likewise are looking for healthier options something more than a chemical response that seems to bring its own complications The interest in organic beekeeping has taken root But organic beekeeping is more complex than you would believe Coming out of an era when defining organics could mean whatever you decided it meant the USDA formed The National Organic Program NOP to bring all organic participants and producers to the same table and get them all on the page The NOP sought to end the duplicity by bringing consistency and integrity with a set of rules and regulations of what organic is and what it is not But this also meant the NOP restricted the use of the word organic until a producer could verify compliance with some very strict regulations A beekeeper cannot simply declare their apiary is organic nor can they describe their management as Natural beekeeping that keeps bees organically In Organic Beekeeping Grant Gillard peels back the implied simplicity and expounds the accountability for beekeepers who want to keep honey bees organically and produce organic honey Our chemical laden industrial production agriculture has made it virtually impossible to legitimately keep honey bees under organic management Our concession as beekeepers is find ways to keep honey bees as organic as possible
