The castles of England, their story and structure sir James Dixon Mackenzie (bart.),1897 Strength in Numbers? Jan E. Leighley,2001-08-12

America's increasing racial and ethnic diversity is viewed by some as an opportunity to challenge and so reinforce the country's social fabric by others as a portent of alarming disunity While everyone agrees that this diversity is markedly influencing political dynamics not only nationally but often on the state and local levels we know little about how racial and ethnic groups organize and participate in politics or how political elites try to mobilize them This book tells us By integrating class based factors with racial and ethnic factors Jan Leighley shows what motivates African Americans Latinos and Anglos to mobilize and participate in politics Drawing on national survey data and on interviews with party and elected officials in Texas she develops a nuanced understanding of how class race and ethnicity act as individual and contextual influences on elite mobilization and mass participation Leighley examines whether the diverse theoretical approaches generally used to explain individual participation in politics are supported for the groups under consideration She concludes that the political and social context influences racial and ethnic minorities decisions to participate but that different features of those environments are important for different groups Race and ethnicity structure participation more than previous research suggests Casting new light on an issue at the crux of contemporary American politics Strength in Numbers will be welcomed by scholars and students of political science African American and Latino studies urban politics and social movements
