Public Mental Health in Trauma and War Gülseren Keskin, Mahire olcay Çam, Man Cheung Chung, 2025-02-06 People living in war zones are exposed to numerous stressors including physical harm, psychological trauma, loss, deprivation, bereavement, or abuse. In recent years, there has been growing acceptance that war-related stressors have the potential to pose a risk to health. Epidemiological studies also reveal the health consequences associated with war and trauma and agree that post-traumatic stress disorder and depression are common in war-affected populations. Since the turn of the last century, there have also been changes in the conception of war. Nowadays, wars have evolved into a new form that can affect larger masses instead of hand-to-hand combat with cannons and rifles. War is an artificial disaster and differs from the kind of natural pandemic disaster that affects the whole world. Countless deaths, forced abandonment of homes, families, friends, and property, and severe anxiety about war are experienced because of the war-related conditions for millions of humans

Anne Duderstadt,James J. Duderstadt,2018 The university is one of the greatest inventions of the present millennium although created more than nine centuries ago it remains one of the glories of human aspiration and one of the triumphs of the power of imagination We as members of its community of learning challenge it to play a transforming role in society and thus to transform itself For 900 years of the present millennium the university as a community dedicated to those values has served society well Its effectiveness in the new millennium will depend on its reaffirmation of those ancient values as it responds creatively to the new challenges and opportunities that confront it This is the moment for both society and the university to reaffirm the social compact on which the future of all our peoples will so largely depend and for their leaders to work together towards the achievement of their common goals The Spang Robinson Report on Artificial Intelligence ,1987
