Electroconvulsive therapy: from mechanisms to clinical practice Mariana Pinto da Costa, Joao Luciano De Quevedo, Mario F. Juruena, Laith Alexander, Cristiana Tapoi, 2025-12-10 Electroconvulsive therapy ECT remains the most effective short term treatment for severe or treatment resistant depressive episodes It is also effective in treatment refractory mania schizophrenia suicidal behavior and catatonia ECT maintains its position as an important treatment in modern psychiatry and no other treatment from pharmacological agents to newer neurostimulation methods have surpassed its efficacy In certain cases ECT should be offered as a first line intervention Despite this ECT is often neglected as a treatment option and this is reflected in the lack of research concerning ECT and the parameters needed to optimize treatment response and minimize side effects. A lack of access to treatment services, a history of stigma and controversy and concerns about side effects all contribute. Furthermore, the clinical uncertainty is compounded by a lack of understanding regarding the fundamental physiological and molecular mechanisms that could explain how ECT works. Our objectives are to highlight and understand the relevance of ECT use in modern psychiatry and the perspectives on its use and to explore the latest findings regarding the underlying neurobiological mechanisms of ECT. We also aim to draw attention to the challenges associated with the use of ECT in clinical practice and to the optimum ways to improve clinical outcomes or limit the short and long term side effects of the procedure. We encourage the submission of manuscripts including original research, systematic reviews, meta-analyses, case reports, letters to the editor regarding the use of ECT in psychiatric practice. For this research topic, the following subjects regarding the mechanisms and clinical use of ECT will be considered: Neurobiological mechanisms of ECT e.g. immunomodulation, neuroplasticity, neural connectivity, modulation of HPA axis, Neuroimaging alterations following ECT use, Efficacy of ECT in the treatment of psychiatric disorders, Modified ECT use e.g. brief and ultrabrief pulse ECT, Individualized treatment parameters in ECT, Impact of various stimulus parameters e.g. electrical pulse shape, amplitude, width and pulse train, directionality, frequency, polarity, duration on the therapeutic response in ECT, ECT use in special populations e.g. comorbid medical problems, pregnancy, geriatric population, children and adolescents, Measurement of ECT side effects and techniques to reduce ECT side effects, Attitudes of mental health providers, patients, caregivers and general population about modern ECT. Topic Editor Dr Joao Quevedo receives clinical research support from LivaNova and holds shares in Instituto de Neurociencias. Dr Joao Quevedo Topic Editor Dr Mario F. Jurueena receives funding from the NIHR Biomedical Research Centre BRC at the South London and Maudsley SLaM NHS Foundation Trust and King's College London. All other Topic Editors declare no competing interests with regards to the Research Topic subject.

Advances in the Management of Lung Cancer: From the Bench to the Bedside and Back Vincenzo Pio Di Noia, Alessandro Leonetti, Francesca Fusco, 2025-08-29 Lung cancer remains one of the most hard to treat malignancies globally representing a significant burden on healthcare systems. It is the leading cause of cancer mortality worldwide and represents one of the neoplasms with the highest incidence. The most important risk factor for lung cancer is smoking. Increasing age is also a risk factor for lung cancer. Smoking cessation and the introduction of screening programs with low dose CT scans represent relevant measures of prevention. Since the prognosis depends on the cancer stage, earlier detection is fundamental to provide access to curative local treatments, most notably surgery. Recent years have witnessed remarkable strides in understanding the molecular landscape of non-small cell lung cancer (NSCLC) and the development of novel therapeutic strategies. The advent of precision oncology has revolutionized NSCLC treatment paradigms with targeted therapies directed against specific molecular alterations such as EGFR mutations, ALK and ROS1 rearrangements and others. Immune checkpoint inhibitors ICIs alone or in combination with chemotherapy have emerged as a cornerstone in the management of advanced NSCLC demonstrating durable responses and prolonged survival in a subset of patients More recently the introduction of immunotherapy in the perioperative setting allows for an increased cure rate in early stage lung cancer Furthermore adjuvant targeted therapy was shown to improve survival outcomes in resected EGFR mutated NSCLC

Meniere's disease is a set of rare inner ear disorders characterized by episodes of vertigo tinnitus aural fullness and fluctuating hearing loss Affecting approximately 0.2% of the population it is equally prevalent among men and women The condition first described by French physician Prosper Meniere in the 19th century presents significant diagnostic challenges due to its symptom overlap with other vestibular disorders Current understanding suggests that Meniere's disease is linked to dysfunction in the volume regulation of endolymphatic fluid within the inner ear although the complex physiological changes that initiate Meniere's disease are still not entirely understood Recent studies have focused on improving diagnostic accuracy through detailed clinical histories audiometry balance function tests and imaging studies like MRI to rule out other conditions Management of Meniere's disease is tailored to each patient focusing primarily upon relief from the debilitating vertigo and preserving hearing It includes lifestyle alterations like limits on sodium intake medications to control vertigo injections into the ear and physiotherapy Surgical interventions may be considered in more severe or refractory cases However the optimal treatment strategies for Meniere's disease remain areas of active investigation This Research Topic aims to address ongoing research regarding the cause of Meniere's Disease as well as new treatment strategies to enable a better understanding of the complexities of this disorder thereby offering a more optimistic outlook for those diagnosed with the condition Specific questions include identifying the underlying pathogenesis improving diagnostic accuracy and evaluating the efficacy of various treatment modalities Hypotheses to be tested may involve the genetic basis of the disease the role of endolymphatic fluid regulation and the effectiveness of novel therapeutic interventions To gather further insights into the complexities of Meniere's Disease we welcome any types of manuscripts supported by the journal pertaining but not limited to the following themes Diagnostic value of vestibular tests in Meniere's Disease Diagnostic value of electrocochleography in Meniere's Disease Pathogenesis of Meniere's Disease Genetic diagnosis of Meniere's Disease Differentiation of Meniere's Disease from Vestibular Migraine Use of Betahistidine and other therapeutic choices in Meniere's Disease Intratympanic steroid injections in Meniere's Disease Effects of surgical therapy on MR evaluated hydrops Treatment related correlations with radiological findings Technical improvements in hydrops imaging Role of imaging in clinical probable Meniere's disease overlap with vestibular migraine

Assessment and Monitoring of Human Movement Cristian Romagnoli,Giuseppe Annino,Elvira Padua,Vincenzo Bonaiuto,2025-10-03 Human movement studies have long involved researchers from various scientific disciplines such as biomechanics functional anatomy physiology and neuroscience in responding to the growing demand in sports science for reliable and accurate methods and tools for monitoring and evaluating physical performance. Accurately measuring body movement data i.e. walking, running, throwing, swimming and paddle stroke is useful for identifying biomechanical and kinetics and physiological and metabolic variables. However, the transition of functional assessment of physical activity with accurate and reliable data from the laboratory to the daily life environment has been complex. Thanks to technological innovation, miniaturized and wearable sensors can non-invasively measure and monitor kinematic and dynamic data related to the performance of a specific sport or physical activity, broadening their application in the clinical field such as monitoring and improving patient care directly at home or at a distance. Therefore, the quantitative analysis of human movement is a necessary and effective tool that helps transversally both the medical, physical fitness and wellness and the purely competitive environment linked to high level sport.
