Individuals: Publication 17 (Includes Form 1040 - Tax Return for 2019) (Clarifications on Maximum Capital Gain Rate & Chapter 20) - Updated Jan 16, 2020 U.S. Internal Revenue Service (IRS),2020-01-29 This publication also known as Publication 17 covers the general rules for filing a 2018 federal income tax return It supplements the information contained in your tax form instruction booklet It explains the tax law to make sure you pay only the tax you owe and no more This is a low cost print edition of a document available online Characteristics of Users of Refund Anticipation Loans and Refund Anticipation Checks The Department of Treasury,2014-08-26 Refund anticipation loans RALs are bank loans secured by the taxpayer s expected refund and Refund anticipation checks RACs are temporary bank accounts established on behalf of a taxpayer into which a direct deposit refund can be received The goal of this project is to provide greater information on the characteristics of RAL RAC users and why they choose these products We find that among the most important characteristics influencing RAL RAC use were lower income young adulthood single head of household filing status receipt of the Earned Income Tax Credit EITC and use of a paid preparer We also find that RALs and RACs are highly spatially concentrated and that living in the poorest communities is associated with dramatic increases in use of these products even after controlling for a taxpayer s income and filing status Also for the first time we found some unique differences in the use of RALs versus RACs according to such variables as military status Finally we find that individuals with any interest and dividend income used RALs and RACs to a much smaller degree than did those with otherwise similar characteristics RALs and RACs are used by one in seven tax filers and more than one in six filers who receive refunds Taxpayers are able to receive their refunds more quickly than a mailed check by using RALs often in one to three days RACs are no quicker than other IRS direct deposit returns but for those who lack a bank account and or would receive a paper check they may speed up receipt of refund by up to six weeks Both RALs and RACs enable payment of tax preparation fees out of the expected refund To gain a better understanding of RAL RACs this report is broadly divided into two sets of research questions The first examines who obtains them and who does not and what demographic economic and geographic factors are associated with the use of these products Using individual level IRS tax filing data from tax year 2008 we provide descriptive breakdowns of many individual and geographical characteristics that are linked with use of RALs RACs We then run cross sectional taxpayer level multivariate models to explain what characteristics are associated with take up of RALs RACs including both personal factors that are captured in individual level tax administration data as well as local factors compiled from several non IRS administrative data sets This quantitative analysis was conducted on IRS provided data on millions of tax filers who received a refund in tax year 2008 With this data set findings are statistically significant for the population of US tax filers The second set of research questions examines why these products exist using interviews with industry stakeholders This research was qualitative in nature What motivates taxpayers to use RALs and RACs What role do tax preparers play And what other and lower cost credit options are available at tax time for low income taxpayers To address these questions we conducted 18 interviews with 11 organizations tax preparers RAL RAC providers RAL RAC tax form software developers low cost RAL lenders and Volunteer Income Tax Assistance VITA program sites that provide free tax preparation services and partner with low cost RAL lenders We found in summary that most RAL and RAC recipients use these products to pay for pressing financial obligations both expected and unexpected and for their tax preparation RAL RAC users particularly those claiming the EITC are driven to paid preparers by the complexity of filing a tax return Stakeholders from the RAL RAC industry do not feel that consumers use these products because they fail to understand that they are loans or because they are not aware of the fees involved Consumer advocates disagree claiming that use is partly driven by aggressive targeted marketing
