

Women

in Jesus' day weren't often treated well.

Understatement. They had few choices, held no positions, and were considered less valuable than the men.

But not to Jesus.

The adulterous woman was caught in the act and dragged to Jesus for judgement. But He called her accusers hypocrites, dispersed the crowd, and extended her grace.

The bleeding woman found Jesus and, upon touching his robe, was immediately healed of her twelve-year-long affliction. In front of the crowd that had deemed her unclean, Jesus honored her for her faith.

The Samaritan woman was drawing water from the community well at the hottest time of day. Translation: she was avoiding people because of her seedy reputation. But ahead of everyone else on earth, Jesus told her He was the Savior they'd been waiting for.

And she got to tell the others.

Bottom line: when the world chose to abuse, alienate, or brutally judge these women, Jesus chose to rescue, restore, and redeem them. To ascribe them value.

Because Jesus makes us what we're not.

A Commentary on the Gospel of St. Luke Frédéric Louis Godet,1887 Reopening the Word Marie Noonan Sabin,2002-02-28 This book asks How might the earliest gospel have been heard by those first followers of Jesus who were religious Jews Assuming that the earliest Jesus traditions took their shape from forms familiar to Judaism Sabin sets the composition of Mark in the context of the theological discourse of first century Judaism In that context she notes all theology was biblical It took the form of an exchange between current events and Scripture contemporary persons and happenings were understood through the lens of the Hebrew Bible while at the same time the biblical word was reopened that is reinterpreted so as to reveal its relevance to the present faith community Applying this kind of compositional process to the Gospel of Mark Sabin uncovers a fresh reading of the seed fig tree and vineyard parables of the various Temple scenes of the foolish disciples and the wise women and of the controversial ending She highlights the results of her findings by juxtaposing them with interpretations of the same passages given by various church fathers such as Origen Irenaeus and Bede as well as by readings from the twentieth century The results are provocative Sabin sees Mark as an original theologian shaping his material out of two primary Jewish traditions the Wisdom traditions with their emphasis on God's presence in daily life and Creation theology which imagined the End Time not as a catastrophe but as a return to the Garden She thus offers a new way of understanding Mark's use of Scripture his eschatology and his presentation of Jesus In conclusion she argues that retrieving Mark's voice in the context of Early Judaism brings with it insights much needed in our day of God's presence in the ordinary of God's image reflected in female as well as male of watchfulness as the way of wisdom of God's revelation as ongoing The NIV Theological Dictionary of New Testament Words Verlyn D.
