more modern phenomenon Diaspora exile and immigration represent three successive phases in Modern Greek history and they are useful vantage points from which to analyse changes in Greek society politics and culture over the last three centuries Embracing a wide range of case studies this volume charts the role of territorial displacements as social and cultural agents from the eighteenth century to the present day and examines their impact on communities politics institutional attitudes and culture By studying migratory trends the aim is to map out the transformation of Greece from a largely homogenous society with a high proportion of emigrants to a more diverse society inundated by immigrants after the end of the Cold War The originality of this book lies in the bringing together of diaspora exile and immigration and its focus on developments both inside and outside Greece Greek America at Work Dan Georgakas,1992 Women, Gender and Labour Migration Pamela Sharpe,2002-01-31 Approximately half of all migrants are today are female The contributors to this volume consider the ways in which attention to gender is moving debates away from old theories that have long dominated the field of migration studies Ethnicity, Class, Gender, and Migration Floya Anthias,1992 This study sets out to place Cypriot migration to Britain within the context of New Commonwealth migration as a whole and within current developments in the field of racial and ethnic relations It provides an account of the economic and social position of Cypriots in British society paying particular attention to a number of central theoretical and political debates relating to class ethnicity racism and gender The book argues that migrant groups have to be understood in terms of the interaction between the internal culture and social differentiations within the group and the wider structural institutional and ideological processes of the country of migration Gender divisions and the family are seen as central in understanding the forms of settlement and the economic and social placement of a migrant group Transnational Identity and Memory Making in the Lives of Iraqi Women in Diaspora Nadia Jones-Gailani,2020 This book draws on an extensive archive of over one hundred oral narratives collected and recorded with Iraqi women in three settlement sites Amman Detroit and Toronto It demonstrates how the relationship between ethno religious migrants nation and citizenship are shaped by the traumatic experiences of forced displacement and integration into new communities and national imaginaries The book also examines broader historical trends that have precipitated migration from Iraq and shaped existing networks into which these women integrate in North America While informed by research into the limited archival documentary record on Iraqis in North America the book is first and foremost a study of gender and memory that centers women s oral histories It also examines how contemporary debates on global citizenship and religious feminism resonate for the individual By historicizing the process by which ethno religious and ethno national communities become fractured and remade the book explores the expectations and realities of women as the supposed biological and cultural reproducers of the nation In diaspora the Iraqi women of this study assert their claims to belonging across three different generations thereby opening up spaces to discuss how sites of migration shape the ability of migrants to lobby for the homeland even as they engage in daily struggles to advance their education and economic stability in Canada and the U S On the Shoulders of Grandmothers Cinzia Solari, 2017-08-03

On the Shoulders of Grandmothers is a global ethnography of Ukrainian transnational migration. Gendered migrant subjectivities are a key site for understanding the production of neoliberal capitalism and Ukrainian nation state building, a fraught process that places Ukraine precariously between Europe and Russia with dramatic implications for the political economy of the region. However, processes of gender and migration that undergird transnational nation state building require further attention. Solari compares two patterns of Ukrainian migration: the forced exile of middle aged women, most grandmothers, to Italy and the voluntary exodus of families led by the same cohort of middle aged women to the United States. In both receiving sites, these migrants are caregivers to the elderly. Using in depth interviews and ethnographic data collected in three countries, Solari shows that Ukrainian nation state building occurs transnationally. She examines the collective practices of migrants who are building the new Ukraine from the outside in and shaping both Italy and the United States as well. The Ukrainian state, in order to fulfil its First World aspirations of joining Europe and distancing itself from all things Soviet, is pursuing a gendered reorganization of family and work structures to achieve a transition from socialism to capitalism. This has created a labor force of migrant grandmothers who carry the new Ukraine on their shoulders. Solari shows that this post Soviet economic transformation requires a change in the moral order as migrant women struggle to understand how to be good mothers and grandmothers and men join women in attempts to teach their children to be successful and honorable people now that the social rules have drastically changed. Looking at individual migrant women and men and their families in Ukraine allows us to see the production of neoliberal capitalism and new nationalism from the ground up and the outside in for a region that promises to be a flashpoint in our century.
