Women In The Field Americas Pioneering Women Naturalists:

Women in the Field Marcia Bonta, 1991 Men generally dominated the study of the outdoors in the late eighteenth through the early twentieth centuries. But there were women in the field too. Marcia Myers Bonta gives biographies of twenty five of these women naturalists in this well detailed study. Bonta divides the women by the subject of their study: naturalists, botanists, entomologists, ornithologists, and ecologists. She also describes a group of women that she considers pioneers, showing them in all their individuality as field persons, as professionals, and as friends with others in their field. A handful were recognized experts. Agnes Chase was considered the best agrostologist in the world. Alice Eastwood was made honorary president of the seventh International Botanical Congress in Sweden. Elizabeth Gertrude Knight Britton was called the mother of bryology. In the 1950s conservationist Rachel Carson became a well known voice in the fight against pesticides, and in 1962 she published Silent Spring, a chilling account of the effects of pesticides on people, wildlife, and the environment. Others were less well known. Jane Colden did botanical work and drawing in the 1740s and 1750s with the support of her father. Martha Maxwell developed a new method of taxidermy in the 1860s, displaying animals in their habitat. Kate Brandegee of California hid her identity from the established botanical community in the East for many years, knowing they would look down on dissenting work done not only in the West but by a woman. This book provides insight and information about the history of American nature study as well as women's roles in the natural sciences. American Women Afield

Marcia Bonta, 1995 Armed with hand lenses and opera glasses, traveling on foot by buggy or model T, they explored thousands of miles of deserts, forests, beaches, and jungles. They were pioneering women naturalists who observed, studied, and experimented, then returned to write up their findings. What resulted were exquisitely written and scientifically accurate accounts of their explorations into natural science, a field long dominated by men. Marcia Myers Bonta has collected the most charming and sensitive writings of twenty five women naturalists of the late nineteenth through early twentieth centuries and supplemented them with well researched biographical profiles. From Susan Fenimore Cooper's early warnings about the profligate use of natural resources to Mary Treat's tenacious defense of her scientific discoveries, from Alice Eastwood's defiance of convention to Caroline Dormon's Lucy Braun's and Rachel Carson's impassioned pleas to save the earth, American Women Afield catalogs the determination and devotion of these early scientists and acknowledges their invaluable contributions to ornithology, entomology, botany, agrostology, and ecology. Each excerpt in this book reveals the important role these women played, not only as writers but as popularizers of nature study at a time when very little literature on this subject was available to the general public. Whether scientist or generalist, the reader will discover insights into their methods of field work as they tame wasps, camp out in jungles, climb unnamed mountaintops, or sit patiently in the woods for hours. Written as a companion book to Bonta's earlier published Women in the Field: America's Pioneering Women Naturalists, American Women Afield adds an additional dimension to female scientific history by presenting the authors' own words.

Luckily for the reader Bonta has scoured libraries museums and private collections to uncover letters out of print journal articles field notes and selected book chapters from the recesses of academia Each selection is unique in style tone and subject and clearly shows not only the authors love of nature but their desire to communicate that love to others American Women Afield is a charming informative and revealing account of pioneering women mentors whose lives have been forgotten for far too long Women in Field Biology Martha L. Crump, Michael J. Lannoo, 2022-08-23 Women are contributing to disciplines once the sole domain of men Field biology has been no different The history of women field biologists embedded in a history largely made and recorded by men has never been written Compilations of biographies have been assembled but the narrative their story has never been told In part this is because many expressed their passion for nature as writers artists collectors and educators during eras when women were excluded from the male centric world of natural history and science The history of women field biologists is intertwined with men s changing views of female intellect and with increasing educational opportunities available to women Given the preponderance of today s professional female ecologists animal behaviorists systematists conservation biologists wildlife biologists restoration ecologists and natural historians it is time to tell this story the challenges and hardships they faced and still face and the prominent role they have played and increasingly play in understanding our natural world For a broader perspective we profile selected European women field biologists but our primary focus is the journey of women field biologists in North America Each woman highlighted here followed a unique path For some personal wealth facilitated their work some worked alongside their husbands Many served as invisible assistants to men receiving little or no recognition Others were mavericks who carried out pioneering studies and whose published works are still read and valued today All served as inspiration and proved to the women who would follow that women are as capable as men at studying nature in nature Their legacy lives on today The 75 female field biologists interviewed for this book are further testament that women have the intellect stamina and passion for fieldwork Women in Wildlife Science Carol L. Chambers, Kerry L. Nicholson, 2022-11-01 The first book to address the challenges and opportunities for women especially from underrepresented communities in wildlife professions Women in Wildlife Science is dedicated to the work of promoting equity diversity and inclusion in wildlife conservation and management Editors Carol L Chambers and Kerry L Nicholson collaborate with a diverse team of authors to analyze the status and celebrate the achievements of women in wildlife science They share proven models and propose new methods to increase the inclusion of women in wildlife professions based on an intersectional framework Centering perspectives from LGBTQ people women of color and members of other marginalized communities this is a groundbreaking and vitally important resource Covering academic and professional spheres Women in Wildlife Science draws on enlightening personal stories and peer reviewed scientific literature unavailable anywhere else to explain the challenges women face in the field of wildlife conservation and management The contributors tackle pivotal issues from recruitment into academic programs to hiring practices and ways to support career advancement in federal state local tribal and private sectors Each chapter includes practical advice and original exercises constructed to help administrators educators managers allies and mentors move intentions into action This pragmatic guide will help to ensure a more diverse just and equitable future for a workforce dedicated to preserving wildlife and the whole of the natural world America's Ocean Wilderness Gary Kroll,2008 Examines a handful of famous ocean explorers and naturalists including Jacques Cousteau Thor Heyerdahl and Rachel Carson among others to demonstrate how their work helped shape the way many Americans would think about and interact with the ocean
