

Chapter 10 -- Security Measures

Physical Measures

- Assets = Security = The more effort or resources are spent on protecting the higher the value.

However business-critical assets = importance is 20-30 times lower (but value) = a difference of 1000-10000 times. Therefore resources are applied the wrong way. This makes it an easy target for attackers to compromise.

Business-criticality and their threat likelihood = higher-value assets are more likely to be attacked.

“Three common assumptions are usually violated when it comes to security:

“Three threat assumptions are often violated without notice and should be considered when designing. “Three threat assumptions are often violated when designing. Redefining the assumptions is required.

“Three threat assumptions that are usually violated when designing:

- Continuous security across every threat assumption. Threats are not static. Threats are changing and shifting and threat models are usually incorrect.
