THE MATERIALS THE WORLD IS MADE OF

STUFF is a tour of the materials that make up the world around us, from the most common to the most exotic. It's a look at the stuff that's all around us, from the clothes we wear to the food we eat, from the buildings we live in to the cars we drive, from the computers we use to the phones we carry. It's a look at the materials that have shaped our world, from the metals and minerals that form the earth to the plastics and polymers that have transformed it. It's a look at the materials that have changed our world, from the cotton and wool that have been used for centuries to the synthetic fibers that have revolutionized the textile industry. It's a look at the materials that have transformed our world, from the steel and concrete that have built the modern city to the silicon and plastic that have created the digital age. It's a look at the materials that have shaped our world, from the wood and stone that have been used for thousands of years to the fiber and plastic that have revolutionized the construction industry. It's a look at the materials that have changed our world, from the oil and gas that have powered the industrial revolution to the wind and solar that have transformed the energy landscape. Creating Material Worlds Louisa Campbell,Adrian Maldonado,Elizabeth Pierce,Anthony Russell,2016-05-07 Despite a growing literature on identity theory in the last two decades much of its current use in archaeology is still driven toward locating and dating static categories such as Phoenician Christian or native Previous studies have highlighted the various problems and challenges presented by identity with the overall effect of deconstructing it to insignificance As the humanities and social sciences turn to material culture archaeology provides a unique perspective on the interaction between people and things over the long term This volume argues that identity is worth studying not despite its slippery nature but because of it Identity can be seen as an emergent property of living in a material world an ongoing process of becoming which archaeologists are particularly well suited to study The geographic and temporal scale of the papers included is purposefully broad to demonstrate the variety of ways in which archaeology is redefining identity Research areas span from the Great Lakes to the Mediterranean with case studies from the Mesolithic to the contemporary world by emerging voices in the field The volume contains a critical review of theories of identity by the editors as well as a response and afterward by A Bernard Knapp

Atlas of Material Worlds Matthew Seibert,2021-08-17 Atlas of Material Worlds is a highly designed narrative atlas illustrating the agency of nonliving materials with unique ubiquitous and often hidden influence on our daily lives Employing new materialism as a jumping off point it examines the increasingly blurry lines between the organic and inorganic engaging the following questions What roles do nonliving materials play Might a closer examination of those roles reveal an undeniable agency we have long overlooked or disregarded If so does this material agency change our understanding of the social structures ecologies economies cosmologies technologies and landscapes that surround us And perhaps most importantly why does material agency matter This is the story of the world s driest nonpolar desert pink flamingos and cerulean blue lithium ponds industrial shipping logistics pudding like jiggling substrates and monuments of mud galactic bodies radioactive sheep and the yellowcake of uranium Put simply this book dares readers to see the world anew from material up Atlas of Material Worlds offers this new relationship to our host environment in a time of mounting crises accelerating climate change ballooning socioeconomic inequality and rising toxic nationalism uniquely telling materialist stories for practitioners and students in landscape architecture and other built environment disciplines
