The Methodical Memory Invention In Current Traditional Rhetoric:

The Methodical Memory Sharon Crowley, 2010-08-20 In this first sustained critique of current traditional rhetorical theory Sharon Crowley uses a postmodern deconstructive reading to reexamine the historical development of current traditional rhetoric. She identifies it as well as the British new rhetoric from which it developed as a philosophy of language use that posits universal principles of mind and discourse. Crowley argues that these philosophies are not appropriate bases for the construction of rhetorical theories much less guides for the teaching of composition. She explains that current traditional rhetoric is not a rhetorical theory and she argues that its use as such has led to a misrepresentation of invention. Crowley contends that current traditional rhetoric continues to prosper because a considerable number of college composition teachers, graduate students, part time instructors and teachers of literature are not involved in the development of the curricula they are asked to teach. As a result their voices necessary to create any true representation of the composition teaching experience are denied access to the scholarly conversations evaluating the soundness of the institutionalized teaching methods derived from the current traditional approach.

Methodical Memory Sharon

Crowley, 2010 Ancient Rhetorics for Contemporary Students Sharon Crowley, Debra Hawhee, 1999 A textbook of American Rhetoric. Rhetorical Memory and Delivery John Frederick Reynolds, 2013-11-05 Why has classical rhetoric been a subject of such growing interest for the past ten years? Because the most exciting work in classical rhetoric has asked us to rethink classical concepts in modern terms. What's been missing at least in book length form is a scholarly rethinking of rhetorical memory and delivery. As many scholars have been noting in their work for some time now three of five classical issues invention, arrangement and style have dominated rhetorical studies while the other two memory and delivery have largely been misunderstood or ignored. Reexamined in light of recent research on orality, literacy and electronic technology, rhetorical memory and delivery issues can become not only central to the field but also key to the continued interest in classical rhetoric. Bringing together national scholars from a variety of related disciplines in which rhetorical memory and delivery issues matter, this collection is the only volume that examines classical and contemporary interpretations of rhetorical memory and delivery in depth and detail.

The Writer's Book of Memory Janine Rider, 2013-11-05 Memory has long been ignored by rhetoricians because the written word has made memorization virtually obsolete. Recently, however, as part of a revival of interest in classical rhetoric, scholars have begun to realize that memory offers vast possibilities for today's writers. Synthesizing research from rhetoric, psychology, philosophy and literary and composition studies, this volume brings together many historical and contemporary theories of memory. Yet its focus is clear: memory is a generator of knowledge and a creative force which deserves attention at the beginning of and throughout the writing process. This volume emphasizes the importance of recognizing memory's powers in an age in which mass media influence us all and electronic communication changes the way we think and write. It also addresses the importance of the individual memory and voice in an age which promotes conformity Written in a strong lively personal manner the book covers a great deal of scholarly material It is never overbearing and the extensive bibliography offers rich vistas for further study The Methodical Memory Sharon Crowley,1990-11-26 In this first sustained critique of current traditional rhetorical theory Sharon Crowley uses a postmodern deconstructive reading to reexamine the historical development of current traditional rhetoric She identifies it as well as the British new rhetoric from which it developed as a philosophy of language use that posits universal principles of mind and discourse Crowley argues that these philosophies are not appropriate bases for the construction of rhetorical theories much less guides for the teaching of composition She explains that current traditional rhetoric is not a rhetorical theory and she argues that its use as such has led to a misrepresentation of invention Crowley contends that current traditional rhetoric continues to prosper because a considerable number of college composition teachers graduate students part time instructors and teachers of literature are not involved in the development of the curricula they are asked to teach As a result their voices necessary to create any true representation of the composition teaching experience are denied access to the scholarly conversations evaluating the soundness of the institutionalized teaching methods derived from the current traditional approach
