

Properties of water

Study Guide with Summary questions

Water is a polar molecule because the hydrogen atoms are more positive than the oxygen atom, which is more negative. This creates a dipole moment that attracts other molecules with opposite charges.

Hydrogen Bonding: Water molecules are able to form hydrogen bonds with other water molecules. This is because the oxygen atom has a partial negative charge, and the hydrogen atoms have a partial positive charge. When two water molecules are close together, the partial positive charge of one molecule's hydrogen atom attracts the partial negative charge of another molecule's oxygen atom. This attraction is strong enough to overcome the repulsion between the two molecules, causing them to stick together.

Dielectric Constant: Water has a dielectric constant of 80, which is higher than most other liquids. This means that water is good at dissolving polar molecules.

Surface Tension: Water has a high surface tension, which is why it is able to support small insects like water striders.

Heat Capacity: Water has a high specific heat capacity, which means it takes a lot of energy to raise its temperature.

Thermal Conductivity: Water has a low thermal conductivity, which means it is not very good at conducting heat.

Viscosity and Diffusion: Water has a low viscosity and a high diffusion rate. This means that water is good at dissolving gases.
