Time Tunnel

Child's Play

TERTIARY PERIOD

From 15 millions of years ago

The gap between ages and humans is believed to have occurred around 17 million years ago. But the earliest human bones in North America appear to be about 15 million years old. The earliest bones of the modern human are about 100,000 years old.

During the Tertiary period, the earth was covered by a thick layer of ice. The climate was very cold and the animals were very different from those of today.
