Design Computing and Cognition '04 John S. Gero, 2004-07 Artificial intelligence provides an environmentally rich paradigm within which design research based on computational constructions can be carried out. This has been one of the foundations for the developing field called design computing. Recently there has been a growing interest in what designers do when they design and how they use computational tools. This forms the basis of a newly emergent field called design cognition that draws partly on cognitive science. This new conference series aims to provide a bridge between the two fields of design computing and design cognition. The papers in this volume are from the First International Conference on Design Computing and Cognition DCC 04 held at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology USA. They represent state of the art research and development in design computing and cognition. They are of particular interest to researchers, developers and users of advanced computation in design and those who need to gain a better understanding of designing.

Ecological Responses to the 1980 Eruption of Mount St. Helens Virginia H. Dale, Frederick J. Swanson, Charles M. Crisafulli, 2006-01-16
Recon guring Disturbance Succession and Forest Management The Science of Mount St Helens When Mount St Helens erupted on May 18 1980 it did more than just recon gure a large piece of Cascadian landscape. It also led to dramatic revisions in our perspectives on disturbances, secondary succession and forestry practices. The Mount St Helens landscape turned out to be a far more complex place than the moonscape that it initially appeared to be. Granted a large area was literally scoured and sterilized and that vast expanse of newly formed rock mud ows and avalanche debris up and down the mountain made the Mount St Helens landscape unique. But I still remember my surprise when as I stepped out of the helicopter on rst landing within the extensive devastated zone I saw hundreds of plants pushing their way up through the mantel of tephra. Surviving organisms were stunning in their diversity, abundance and the mechanisms by which they survived. They persisted as whole organisms living below ground encased within late persisting snowbanks and buried in lake and stream sediments. They survived as rhizomes transported along with the massive landslide that accompanied the eruption and as stems that suffered the abrasion of mud ows. Mud ows oated nurse logs covered with tree seedlings and then redeposited them on the oor of a forested river terrace. Millions perhaps billions of plants survived as rootstocks and rhizomes that pushed their way up through the tephra and others survived on the bases of uprooted trees.
