Understanding Cross-cultural Supervision in the Creative Arts Therapies Kay Choi, 2016 Cross cultural and or multicultural issues and considerations are increasingly becoming more relevant to the creative arts therapies practice and supervision This systematic literature review aimed to investigate the existing body of cross cultural multicultural supervision literature in the fields of music therapy art therapy drama therapy and dance movement therapy as well as to identify the gaps in the knowledge English language literature published between 2000 and 2015 was examined to ascertain its relevance to the cross cultural issues and challenges that exist within supervision of supervisors and supervisees with racial ethnic differences A search strategy that included a review of electronic databases and grey literature as well as hand searching of journals and edited books was undertaken Fourteen sources were identified as providing valuable information related to cross cultural multicultural supervision seven music therapy three art therapy one drama therapy and three dance movement therapy publications Review of the identified sources indicated that cultural differences had an impact on the process and the relationship in the cross cultural supervision Furthermore these differences may provide opportunities for enhanced understanding and awareness of cultural backgrounds biases and assumptions of supervisors and supervisees through sharing and open discussions Findings also suggested the need for future research in the general topic of cross cultural supervision in the creative arts therapies fields This review offers an accessible resource for creative arts therapists to existing cross cultural supervision resources where they can assess the current state of the literature and better understand the complex dynamics of cross cultural supervision experiences

Playing in a House of Mirrors Elinor Vettraino, Warren Linds, 2015-07-27 This book explores the concept of reflection through a dramaturgical lens as practitioners in a wide range of disciplines hold up the mirror to their own practice using theatre and theatricality as a way of unpacking their individual and collective practice Editors and authors consider the use of drama as the vehicle through which learning takes place for the leader facilitator or manager of an experience rather than the use of drama and theatre as a tool for learning subject content Reflective practice is an often cited term in the professional thesaurus of educators social work practitioners and health care workers It is perhaps less commonly thought of as the purview of leaders of industry marketing managers and scientists We define reflective practice in this context as the development of capacities to reflect on actions behaviours and attitudes that impact on your own practice or on the way others engage in their practice so as to be part of a process of continuous learning It is therefore crucial for any professional to understand how and why we behave and interact with others the way we do

Intercultural Dramatherapy Ditty Dokter, Nisha Sajani, 2022-12-29 The first overarching work on dramatherapy intercultural practice and research this book explores the therapeutic encounter between therapists and participants as an intercultural space highlighting how attending to cultural differences informs care Drawing on international voices of practitioners and participants each chapter seeks to explore how social and political struggles such as rising global conservatism nationalism climate crisis increasing displacement and the coronavirus pandemic are experienced in dramatherapy Main themes covered include the development of intercultural good practice guidelines therapist transparency especially through self disclosure and transference issues for the therapist and the negotiation of power relationships across identity differences The book concludes with a section on recommendations for training supervision and practice A resource from which new practice and research can emerge this book will be valuable to dramatherapy educators practitioners and students specifically those interested in intercultural practice
