Supporting Social Emotional Development In Young Children:

Supporting Social Emotional Development in Young Children Eva M. Horn, Hazel Jones, 2006 Create an Emotion-Rich Classroom Lindsay N. Giroux, 2022-10-11 Strategies and activity ideas to support emotional development in children. What is an emotion rich classroom? Similar to how a print rich environment exposes children to a variety of printed materials, an emotion rich one intentionally surrounds children with a wide range of social emotional learning experiences and supportive interactions. Create an Emotion Rich Classroom provides frameworks for planning and implementing strategies to support emotional development in children. This practical and easy to use resource helps early childhood educators develop the emotional literacy of the young children in their classrooms. Readers learn how to increase children's emotional vocabulary, how to recognize and cope with various emotions, support self regulation and reduce challenging behaviors, discuss emotions in others and in storybook characters, support and engage families in fostering emotional skills at home. Experienced in emotional development in children and early childhood education author Lindsay N. Giroux, M. Ed. shows readers how to effectively weave social and emotional instruction into the fabric of the school day. Create an Emotion Rich Classroom focuses on individual skills making social and emotional instruction specific and measurable. With consistently structured chapters, this book is easy to use and rich in ideas and strategies. Digital content includes checklists, planning sheets and other materials to support educators as they build an emotion rich classroom. A free downloadable PLC Book Study Guide is available.

Promoting Healthy Social-emotional Development in Vulnerable Young Children Jill Ashley Hoffman, 2016 Children's earliest experiences are critical for health and well-being across the lifespan. These experiences shape the development of social emotional skills which lay the foundation by which children learn to navigate the intricacies of social interactions and complex emotions. Not all children, however, develop the social emotional skills needed for success with between 9 and 14% of children in early childhood exhibiting some type of social emotional deficit. Brauner, Stephens, 2006 Difficulties with early social emotional skills may lead to behavioral, academic and social problems during early childhood as well as later in life. Denham, Brown, 2010 Low income children of color often face barriers that put them at risk for poor social emotional skill development. In an effort to support these vulnerable young children, the social settings in which they spend time should be targeted. One key setting in which many young children spend time is center-based child care. Examining this setting is a growing priority so that the contributions of child care toward child social emotional outcomes are maximized. Using secondary data from the Head Start Family and Child Experiences Survey (FACES), 2009 this study examined child care as a social setting that may positively influence social emotional skill development among young low-income children of color. Specifically, this study used multilevel modeling to explore child care center support and also teacher emotional support and behavior management practices and their influence on problem behaviors and social skill development among young children. Findings revealed that neither teacher emotional support practices nor teacher behavior management practices were significantly associated with child social skills or problem behaviors. However, teacher perceived center support was significantly related to child problem behaviors among low income children of color with higher teacher perceived center support associated with fewer problem behaviors. In addition, results suggested that neither teacher nor center director perceived center support were significantly associated with teacher emotional support practices in the classroom. However, teacher perceived center support was significantly associated with teacher behavior management practices. Findings from the current study highlight the importance of continued research on the influence child care settings have on the social emotional skill development of young low income children of color. A better understanding of these center and teacher factors as well as their relationship to child social emotional outcomes will allow social workers to more effectively work with child care administrators and teachers in developing and supporting social emotional programming in centers serving low income children of color. In the end, this work will help to create richer child care settings that ultimately better support social emotional skill development, fostering positive long term outcomes for vulnerable young children.

Becoming and Belonging Wecan Early Childhood Research Group, Holly Koteen-Soulé, 2024-06. Waldorf early education from its inception has incorporated opportunities for social emotional development through wholesome day to day experiences. But a host of world events and societal issues have impacted the way in which children meet each other and the world. In Becoming and Belonging the WECAN Early Childhood Research Group re-examines essential aspects of early childhood education in light of these influences. How can we better support children to meet our current social challenges? How can we prepare them to meet the social challenges of the future? Becoming and Belonging discusses creating space for emotional well-being and social healing, establishing the foundations for healthy relationships, nourishing sensory development and more.

Innovative Approaches to Supporting Families of Young Children Cheri J. Shapiro, Charlyn Harper Browne, 2016-08-02. This invaluable reference introduces successful strengths based programs for aiding families of young children in critical social contexts: family, school, community and policy. The wide range of systems contextual approaches described here are based in current understanding of children's development, stress and resilience in families, cultural competence and the two generational approach to intervention. Research based examples across early care and early learning platforms illustrate the links between parental protective factors and children's academic and social outcomes and between family stability and larger social goals. By supporting parents and children equally, the contributors assert these interventions more fully address developmental and family issues than programs that mainly serve one generation or the other. Included in the coverage: Parent and community focused approaches to supporting parents of young children; the Family Networks Project; div Honoring parenting values, expectations and approaches across cultures; Building young children's executive functions at home and in early care and education settings; Promoting early childhood development in the pediatric medical home; Neighborhood approaches to supporting families of young children; Public policy strategies to promote the well being of families with young children Innovative Approaches for Supporting Parents of Young Children benefits professionals and practitioners working to support families of young children particularly those interested in social work psychology public policy and public health Supporting Preschoolers' Social-emotional Development Alexandra Dawn Robinson, California State University, Sacramento, 2012 Head Start is the nation's largest federally sponsored early childhood program developed to serve at risk vulnerable young children by promoting school readiness There are many curricula now developed to address social emotional competence that can be used by SETA Head Start However these materials are not typically disseminated to Head Start staff Further these materials are not specifically geared toward SETA Head Start students and families Thus the purpose of this project was to develop and present evidence based materials to SETA Head Start teachers that will help them support and promote social emotional development for preschoolers in their care To address this issue a workshop was created based on research in social and emotional development in young children A needs assessment was distributed to all SETA Head Start teachers in the Sacramento area The needs assessment included a survey of what teachers felt they needed more support with when working in their preschool classrooms Based on the responses from the returned needs assessments a review of the scholarly literature and review of evidence based social emotional curricula a workshop was developed and implemented by the author The workshop included content on emotion understanding emotion regulation and social competencies These concepts were defined and strategies to support those key areas of development in the classroom were discussed Resources were shared that can help teachers promote and support social and emotional development in their classroom Evaluations were given to all teachers in attendance at the workshop to further develop this project The results of this evaluation were discussed and suggestions for creating effective future workshops that benefit teachers parents and families in SETA Head Start were formulated Social & Emotional Development Dave Riley, Robert San Juan, Joan Klinkner, Ann Ramminger, 2007-09-01 Shows how research confirms that common early learning practices promote social emotional development The SAGE Encyclopedia of Contemporary Early Childhood Education Donna Couchenour, J. Kent Chrisman, 2016-08-16 The general public often views early childhood education as either simply babysitting or as preparation for later learning Of course both viewpoints are simplistic Deep understanding of child development best educational practices based on development emergent curriculum cultural competence and applications of family systems are necessary for high quality early education Highly effective early childhood education is rare in that it requires collaboration and transitions among a variety of systems for children from birth through eight years of age The SAGE Encyclopedia of Contemporary Early Childhood Education presents in three comprehensive volumes advanced research accurate practical applications of research historical foundations and key facts from the field of contemporary early childhood education Through approximately 425 entries this work includes all areas of child development physical cognitive language social emotional aesthetic as well as comprehensive review of best educational practices with
