Washington, after President Carter's announcement that he would not seek re-election in 1980, the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) has been ordered to conduct a study of the agency's role in the Vietnam War.

The study, which is being conducted by the CIA's Office of the Inspector General, is expected to be completed by the end of the year. The study will look at the CIA's role in the Vietnam War, including its involvement in the search for North Vietnamese leaders.

The CIA's role in the Vietnam War has been a subject of controversy for many years. Some people believe that the CIA played a major role in the war, while others believe that its role was minor. The study is expected to provide a detailed account of the CIA's activities in Vietnam.

The study is being conducted by the CIA's Office of the Inspector General, which is responsible for overseeing the agency's operations. The study will be a comprehensive review of the CIA's activities in Vietnam, from the beginning of the war to the end.
