The Transit of Venus Enterprise in Victorian Britain Jessica Ratcliff, 2015-07-28 In nineteenth century the British Government spent money measuring the distance between the earth and the sun using observations of the transit of Venus This book presents a narrative of the two Victorian transit programmes It draws out their cultural significance and explores the nature of big science in late Victorian Britain Free Will and the Human Sciences in Britain, 1870-1910 Roger Smith, 2015-07-28 From the late nineteenth century onwards religion gave way to science as the dominant force in society This led to a questioning of the principle of free will if the workings of the human mind could be reduced to purely physiological explanations then what place was there for human agency and self improvement Smith takes an in depth look at the problem of free will through the prism of different disciplines Physiology psychology philosophy evolutionary theory ethics history and sociology all played a part in the debates that took place His subtly nuanced navigation through these arguments has much to contribute to our understanding of Victorian and Edwardian science and culture as well as having relevance to current debates on the role of genes in determining behaviour The Making of British Anthropology, 1813-1871

Efram Sera-Shriar, 2015-07-28 Victorian anthropology has been called an armchair practice distinct from the scientific discipline of the 20th century Sera Shriar argues that anthropology went through a process of innovation which built on bservational study and that nineteenth century anthropology laid the foundations for the field based science of today

Higgitt, 2007 From Citizens to Subjects challenges the common assertion in historiography that Enlightenment era centralization and rationalization brought progress and prosperity to all European states arguing instead that centralization failed to improve the socio economic position of urban residents in the former Polish Lithuanian Commonwealth over a 100 year period Murphy examines the government of the Polish Lithuanian Commonwealth and the several imperial administrations that replaced it after the Partitions comparing and contrasting their relationships with local citizenry minority communities and nobles who enjoyed considerable autonomy in their management of the cities of present day Poland Ukraine and Belarus He shows how the failure of Enlightenment era reform was a direct result of the inherent defects in the reformers visions rather than from sabotage by shortsighted local residents Reform in Poland Lithuania effectively destroyed the existing system of complexities and imprecisions that had allowed certain towns to flourish while also fostering a culture of self government and civic republicanism among city citizens of all ranks and religions By the mid nineteenth century the increasingly immobile post Enlightenment state had transformed activist citizens into largely powerless subjects without conferring the promised material and economic benefits of centralization Journal of Astronomical History and
