

Consider input failures when writing programs.

As in the programmable control module (PCM) and the universal PCM (UPCM), consider failure scenarios in your programs. For example, what should happen if the mixed air temperature sensor fails on an air-handling unit? Checking for failures is easy using the Fail block (Figure 18-7).

PHOTO BY

The Fail block can check either hardware inputs for failure or communicated (network variable) inputs for invalid values.

Write to variables only once in a program.

Prevent potential conflicts by writing to variables only once in a program. Also, be careful when writing to the same variable from multiple programs. You must consider which program will determine the final value for the variable.

Control outputs only once in a program.

You can prevent potential problems by writing to an output only once per program. Also, be careful when controlling a single output from multiple programs. If you are watching a binary output turn off, then on, then off again, and so on but you know that it should remain on, take a look at the status of the output in the Rover service tool. If you see that the control source is alternating between two different programs, the problem is that the output is controlled in two programs.
