My Mourning Routine

When my mother died, I had a "Mourning Routine" which consisted of mourning clothes, death candles lit on my knees, and the prayer: "Oh Father, be comfort to those that are dying, comfort those who are dying, comfort those who are dying."

I usually wear mourning clothing, a practice that helps me focus on the spiritual side and provides for the day when I stand with you on spiritual ground. I'll never prepare to go to heaven and mourning.

The routine also includes wearing a ring of white roses every day to remind me of my mother. I also wear a ring of white roses every day to remind me of my mother. I also wear a ring of white roses every day to remind me of my mother.

These small mourning signs make a statement of mourning and comfort to my life.
