Phonics Practice Review Setup:

A Scoping Study Into Perceptions of Phonological Pedagogy in Rural Ghana Christopher John Counihan, 2010-01-27 Ghana's education system is in a state of transition. Since the introduction of the Free and Compulsory Universal Basic Education (FCUBE) initiative in 1995, the country has struggled to meet with the demands of providing accessible schooling for children at any level. Moreover, with the underdevelopment of early years and primary provision, more children face slipping through the net. The battle to get children into schools and keep them there is proving to be problematic across the country. As a result, children are losing out on vital core learning experiences, particularly literacy. English is the medium of instruction in Ghana and is taught in schools from the primary level. However, with a blend of English and mother tongue instruction, children are finding it significantly harder to grasp the basic skills. As a result, support from NGOs and teaching professionals have sought to find practical solutions through vis-à-vis and reciprocal partnerships.

The primary years are recognised as a distinct period in a child's development with significant consequences for ongoing educational success. During this critical time formal schooling and the associated activities introduce children to new and extended social roles where they learn to cooperate and collaborate with their peers and adults. Children also begin to develop a sense of themselves and their competence in a range of domains including social academic sport and music. This edited collection provides specialist guidance in developing curriculum pedagogy and assessment to meet the needs of primary years children. The text begins by exploring the unique characteristics of this age group including cognitive social emotional and physical development. It considers the expectations of teachers including ethical and legal issues and guidance on how to develop positive learning spaces and collaborative approaches. There is an exploration of the needs of the child including facilitating transition from the early years and into secondary school. The text then considers the curriculum in depth including language and literacy mathematics and numeracy science and technology health and physical education and the humanities. A focus on some of the key challenges in primary education brings the book to its conclusion including effectively harnessing digital technology developing age appropriate pedagogies practising differentiated learning and effective assessment. Rich with insights from experts in the field and featuring case studies and practical examples throughout this is a key resource for both pre-service and in-service primary teachers. Other professionals working with primary years students and parents will also benefit from engaging with this book.

The Creative Art of Troublemaking in Education Frank Coffield, 2024-09-09 Drawing on a lifetime's experience and research in education Frank Coffield brings together some of his previously published papers to assess the impact of a wide range of national educational policies and to examine the role of the state in public education. He concludes that damage has been done to education by political parties of both right and left and that damage will not be reversed until further vocational and adult education receive the same levels of commitment and resource as other sectors. Serious steps are taken to tackle Britain's unacceptable levels of poverty and the powers of the state are reduced. Among the unresolved challenges highlighted are the plight of young people from deprived estates their tactics in dealing with unemployment the task of improving learning schools inspection and system governance the failure to increase productivity being blamed solely on education and the dysfunctional and undemocratic political framework on which education reform is forced to depend. An essential read for anyone in education this provocative criticism of our past and current educational system provides an
